FALL, 1955

A MAGNIFICENT PRIVILEGE

By the Rev. Robert F. Caverlee, D.D.
Pastor of the First Baptist Church

Lord, teach us to pray. Luke 11:1

Prayer is the greatest privilege accorded in the divine plan to mankind, regardless of a person's state or condition. To be able to lift the soul voice and say, "Abba, Father," is a privilege which is denied to none. From the sinner's, "Lord be merciful to me a sinner" to the Christian's holy fellowship in magnificent solitude the privilege of prayer unlocks the divine resources for the vast needs in the business of living.

Prayer is a privilege which is much misused, abused, and neglected. Too many times we wait for a crisis of life before we cry to the Heavenly Father. Certainly He meant it to be the means of an established, constant relationship through which He might pour divine strength and wisdom into the weakness of human life that it might be lived abundantly and triumphantly. Prayer is more than the meaningless muttering of the lips or the ritual of ceremonial words. It is the answer of the soul hunger to be fed from the tables of God. The babe hungers and is only satisfied when it feeds from the mother's breast. The soul in its restlessness hungers and is only satisfied when it meets the throbbing heart of God.

Prayer is a practical element in our living. It should be used even in the most commonplace experiences of life when decisions are to be made or circumstances overcome in the daily program of living. Prayer is a resource for the crises of life. When the impacts of life come and confusion is the lot of mind and soul, then prayer clarifies the issue and gives divine strength to meet the bitter crisis which presses upon us.

Prayer, as an habitual relationship day in and day out, clothes life with worth and deep meaning and transforms even the rugged experience of the day in a divine light of promise and security. In the midst of our present day chaos and restlessness of spirit, let us give our out-reaching souls free rein until they touch the heart of God through the simplicity of our prayer life. Pray in sincerity the prayer of the disciples of Jesus long ago and your pathway will be filled with the glory of God.

"Lord, teach us to pray."

While this bulletin was at the press word was received of the death of Dr. Morgan Lafayette Combs on October 25 at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital in Richmond after a long illness. The Alumnae Association extend sympathy to the family.
